

Growing Up Akron

Daniel Tate

I grew up in Akron, and I remember going to Spicer Hall with my dad when he would sign up for classes in the early 1980s. As a treat, we would get pizza in the Chuckery after he was done. I always wanted to go to The University of Akron like my dad. While going to college, I remember that my dad used to deliver newspapers, and one house he would deliver to was 910 Eaton Ave—the President’s Residence for Muse and Guzzetta. The house stood out to him because it had a pool in the basement, an elevator, and nine bathrooms.

Fast forward to after high school, and The University of Akron’s Computer Engineering program was a perfect fit.

After graduating from Akron's Computer Engineering program, I applied to The University of Akron School of Law. Using both my engineering and law degrees from Akron, I now practice Patent Law. One of the interesting hailing from Akron points is that not only did I go to Akron like my dad, but my family now lives in the old President's Residence that my dad would talk about. We have a ton of really old and neat photos of when the University owned the house, along with a bunch of blue prints. Thus, we feel we live with a piece of The University of Akron's history.
