Upon completion of my Honors Project, I will have filmed, edited, planned, and directed a documentary on poverty in Akron. Through film, I will show the community what it is like to be homeless, without anyone there to look out for you. I will journey around Akron, looking to find a specific homeless man I once met. Along the way, I hope to come across other people without homes who will share stories about their lives, either in passing or through interviews. If I do not end up finding the man I set out to find, I will still be able to put together an excellent documentary film on poverty (and all that goes along with it) with a quick rewrite and using footage I already have. I hope to begin filming the first of May, and have everything completely edited and have a final draft ready by October first. I hope that this documentary will shed light on poverty for those in the community that know little about it. All-in-all, this documentary project will be the cherry on top of my academic experience and hopefully prove to be a project that truly is a masterpiece.
