LEGISLATIVE DEVELOPMENTS IN THE SAVINGS AND LOAN INDUSTRY

This issue of the Akron Law Review is the first to be devoted entirely to legal questions relating to the savings and loan industry. The following student project consists of three articles which contain in depth examinations of recent legislative developments and their effects on the savings and loan industry. The first article focuses on the structure and constitutionality of state parity statutes and regulations which tie state law to federal law. The second article discusses the possibility of the formation of an Ohio bank for savings associations, owned and operated as a central reserve bank which would exclusively cater to the needs of savings institutions. The final article examines the potential impact of federal securities laws on savings associations which act as trustees for private retirement and pension plans.
